DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to application filed 11/06/2001.
2. Claims 1-17 are pending. Claims 1, 9, and 10 are independent claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 1-2, 4-5, 7, 10-11, 13-14, and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being unpatentable by Stone et al. US Pub No. 2002/0107889 A1 issued 08/08/2002 filed 02/08/2001 (hereinafter '889).

In regard to dependent claim 1, "receiving report content in a markup language format; and generating a markup language format report by applying a stylesheet language format to the received report content", as taught by '889 at page 3, paragraph [0031] (i.e. The destination location 18 includes a report generator 38 that interfaces with the remote data access control facility 16 via the network 14. The destination location 18 utilizes the communication link 13 to access the network 14 for communication with the remote data access control facility 16. The report generator 38 provides the destination location 18 with the capability to perform preferred data analytics on the data packaged by the originator location 12. The report generator 38 is capable of performing data analytics while the data is in a markup language format...), and also as taught by '889 at page 5, paragraph [0048] (i.e. ...the report generator organizational unit object 106 that defines one or more report templates without any parameters ...may contain one or more style sheets that define the viewing format of the analytic reports...).

In regard to dependent claim 2, "wherein the markup language format is XML based", as taught by '889 at page 3, paragraph [0031] (i.e. ...markup language format such as XML..).

In regard to dependent claim 4, "wherein the generated markup language format report is HTML-based", as taught by '889 at pages 3-4, paragraph [0031] (i.e. ...publish the analytic results in a pre-defined format such as, the hypertext markup language (HTML) format, or the Microsoft Excel format, or the like...).

In regard to dependent claim 5, "wherein the received report content is received from a web site", as taught by '889 at page 6, paragraph [0052] (i.e. ... the originator location 12 forwards the markup language document, via the network 14, to the web server 32 of the remote data access control facility 16...).

In regard to dependent claim 7, "wherein the received report content is received from a data store", as taught by '889 at page 6, paragraph [0021] (i.e. ... A "destination" defines a business entity location where the transaction data is routed the communication network to perform data analytics. A destination location may be an originating business entity, or a recipient business entity, or a third party to the business transaction, such as a top tier supplier or the operator or the communication network....).

In regard to independent claim 10, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 1, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claim 11, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 2, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claims 13-14 consecutively, are directed to a system for performing the method of claims 4-5 consecutively, and are similarly rejected under the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claim 16, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 7, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 3, 6, 8-9, 12, 15, and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable by Stone et al. US Pub No. 2002/0107889 A1 issued 08/08/2002 filed 02/08/2001 (hereinafter '889), in view of Howard et al. US Patent No. 6,768,994 B1 issued 07/27/2004 filed 02/23/2001 (hereinafter '994).

Claim 3 is representing claims 3, 6, 8;

In regard to dependent claim 3, '889 does not explicitly teach, "The method as claimed in claim 1, wherein the stylesheet language format is XSL based", however, as taught by '994 at col. 6, lines 15-20 (i.e..... The reported XML data may be re-formatted in XSL through the web browser for viewing on a web page...).

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include a feature, wherein the stylesheet language format is XSL based. One of the ordinary skills in the art would have been motivated to perform such a modification to generate reports, wherein the reports can be reformatted and customized using XSL stylesheets. With XSL, the user also can see the full report, hide pieces of information, switch between different views of the data such as text and charts, all without returning to the server for more information. As long as the data stay the same, stylesheets allow the user to reformat the display of that information on their computer, as taught by '994 at col. 5, lines 30-35 (i.e....advantage of the invention is that reports can be reformatted and customized using XSL stylesheets...).

In regard to dependent claim 6, "wherein the generated markup language format report is generated at a receiving computer", as taught by '994 at col. 5, lines 35-39 (i.e. ... allow the user to reformat the display of that information on their computer. Further customization of the reports is available through a "My Reports" configuration...).

In regard to dependent claim 8, "wherein the received report content is received by a web browser", as taught by '994 at col. 6, lines 15-20 (i.e. ... The reported XML data may be re-formatted in XSL through the web browser for viewing on a web page...).

In regard to independent claim 9, incorporate substantially similar subject matter as cited in claims 1-8 above, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claim 12, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 3, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claim 15, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 6, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

In regard to dependent claim 17, is directed to a system for performing the method of claim 8, and is similarly rejected along the same rationale.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
